UNIVERSITY of GUYANA

OAS – Government to Chile Scholarship and Training Project for CARICOM Countries

Scholarship Offer in partnership with The University of Guyana

Available to citizens of Guyana ONLY

AVAILABLE COURSE: WATER QUALITY MONITORING

▼ DESCRIPTION AND BENEFIT OF PARTICIPATING IN THE COURSE:

Water quality monitoring is a vital tool for managing water resources. This 4-day course/workshop provides an introduction to water quality sampling and analysis. It covers topics on water quality concepts, and water quality sampling and analysis, and practical/hands-on exposure to sample collection and field-based measurement of selected water quality parameters. Participants will receive important tools and knowledge to assist them with identifying water pollution, collecting water samples, using field equipment to measure water quality and undertaking selected statistical techniques to interpret data.

▼ COURSE OBJECTIVE AND PROFILE OF PARTICIPANTS:

Upon successful completion of the course, participants should be able to:

- describe different water pollutant groups and selected water quality parameters
- describe how to collect surface and ground water samples
- collect surface water and tap water samples, observing the necessary protocols
- use field equipment to measure selected water quality parameters
- apply basic statistical techniques for water quality data evaluation

Target Group/Profile of Participants:

The training is designed for anyone who is interested in water quality. A sound secondary science background is necessary. The course should prove beneficial to persons working in water resources management, natural resources management, environmental management, health, agriculture and/or community development. Persons who may be interested include teachers, community health workers, agriculture workers, agriculture extension officers, environmental officers, rangers, scientists and environmental consultants.
